2017 Day of the Dead in Mazatlán

Visit Mazatlan, Sinaloa and celebrate Dia de los Muertos in the Centro Historico and beyond!

November 1, 2017

If you want to experience a truly profound and theatrical Mexican cultural event, look no further than the Day of the Dead (Día de los Muertos) in Mazatlan!

The Dia de los Muertos holiday observed throughout Mexico is centered on gatherings of family and friends to remember, pray for and celebrate the lives of family members and companions who have died.

The Day of the Dead is always November 1, and is the middle of a three day period -- October 31, November 1 and November 2 -- that marks All Hallows' Eve, Halloween, and All Souls' Day.

Far from being somber, the Day of the Dead in Mazatlan -- and throughout Mexico -- is very much a celebration, and life-affirming.

The public celebration of Dia de los Muertos in Mazatlan begins the evening of November 1st, in the heart of the Centro Historico, the Plaza Machado. At about 8pm wildly costumed crowds begin a festive parade (Callejoneada) through the Centro Historico. Skeltons and Catrinas are a common sight, and skull makeup is very much the look, especially for the ladies.

In 2016 over 200 artists performed as part of the Mazatlan Day of the Dead celebrations, and revelers in the Centro Historico enjoyed truck loads of beer, as well as the many galleries and other businesses that stayed open and invited strollers to enjoy the beauty of their Day of the Dead shrines.
